

Russell Bingham, PA-C, MPAS

Russell graduated with a Bachelor of Science in Psychology. He joined Mayo Clinic at Jacksonville in 2012. There he worked in various positions as part of a multidisciplinary healthcare team. He started in Gastroenterology and joined a research team to study the treatment of various colon cancers. While serving in research he published multiple papers which further advanced the care and treatment of colon cancer. He later joined the strategic research team which focused on the treatment of various cancer types as well as the field of Alzheimer's research. During his time in Strategic Research he helped secure many National Institutes of Health and Department of Defense funded research projects. These projects aimed at the progressing of our knowledge of targeted cancer treatment. These NIH and DOD funded studies also allowed for better individualized medicine to care for patients suffering from Alzheimer's disease. In 2019, Russell switched his focus from the laboratory to patient care. He left Mayo Clinic to complete a Masters degree in Physician Assistant studies. He graduated in 2022 and chose to pursue a career in Pain Management. He moved from Florida to South Carolina and has been providing high quality patient care to patients in the Columbia area.
